
How To Tantric Love Making

*How To Tantric Love
Making*

*Downloaded from www.whlarchitecture.com
by Amy & Walls*

HOW TO TANTRIC LOVE MAKING: A PATH TO DEEPER INTIMACY AND SACRED CONNECTION

In a world that often prioritizes speed and performance, the ancient practice of tantric love making offers a profound alternative. It is not merely a set of sexual techniques but a holistic approach to intimacy that blends breath, presence, and conscious energy flow. Learning how to tantric love making is less about reaching a destination and more about savoring every moment of the journey. This guide will walk you through the core principles, practical preparations, and step-by-step techniques to transform your intimate experiences into something truly sacred and deeply fulfilling.

What Is Tantric Love

Making?

At its heart, tantric love making is a meditative and spiritual practice that views sexual energy as a powerful life force. Originating from ancient Eastern traditions, it seeks to unite the physical, emotional, and spiritual aspects of two partners. Unlike conventional intimacy that often focuses on climax, tantra emphasizes sustained pleasure, deep connection, and the circulation of energy throughout the body. The goal is to create a union of consciousness, where partners feel profoundly present with each other, often experiencing heightened states of bliss and oneness. Understanding how to tantric love making starts with shifting your intention from performance to presence.

The Core Principles of Tantric Practice

Before diving into specific techniques, it is essential to grasp the foundational pillars that support tantric love making. These principles will guide every action and intention.

- Presence and Mindfulness:

Being fully in the here and now.
Let go of past experiences and future expectations. Focus entirely on the sensations, sounds, and feelings of the current moment with your partner.

- Conscious Breathing: Breath is the vehicle for moving energy. Deep, synchronized breathing helps calm the nervous system, heightens awareness, and allows sexual energy to flow freely through the body.
- Energy Circulation: Tantra teaches that sexual energy can be circulated upward through the spine and throughout the body, rather than being quickly released. This builds intense, whole-body pleasure.

- Eye Contact and Heart Connection: Sustained, loving eye contact during intimacy can be incredibly powerful. It fosters vulnerability, trust, and a deep sense of being seen and accepted.
- Slowing Down: Tantric love making is a slow, deliberate practice. Rushing dissipates energy. Slowing down amplifies sensation and prolongs the experience of connection.

Preparing Your Space and Yourself

Creating the right environment is crucial when learning how to tantric love making. Your external space often reflects and influences your internal state.

Creating a Sacred Space: Dedicate a space in your home for your practice. This does not need to be elaborate. A clean, uncluttered room with soft lighting (candles are wonderful) and a comfortable surface like a thick blanket or a mattress on the floor works perfectly. Consider adding elements that appeal to the senses: a light incense or essential oil diffuser for scent, soft and warm textures for touch, and perhaps some soothing instrumental music or nature sounds.

Preparing Your Body and Mind: Approach your practice with intention. Take a warm bath or shower beforehand, perhaps with your partner. This is a ritual of cleansing and transition. Gently stretch your hips, shoulders, and spine to release physical tension. Set an intention for your session. It could be as simple as "I intend to connect deeply with my partner" or "I intend to feel more pleasure and presence." This shared intention becomes the anchor for your experience.

Step-by-Step Guide: How To Tantric Love Making

This is a suggested sequence, but remain flexible. Let intuition guide you as much as technique.

1. THE OPENING: SITTING FACE TO FACE

Begin by sitting cross-legged facing each other, close enough that your knees can touch or intertwine. Rest your hands gently on each other's hearts or thighs. Close your eyes and take a few minutes to breathe together. Try to synchronize your breath: inhale together, exhale together. This simple act begins to harmonize your energy. After a few minutes, slowly open your eyes and meet your partner's gaze. Hold this eye contact softly, without staring intensely. Allow a gentle smile to arise. Stay here for several breaths, feeling the connection forming.

2. THE BREATH: YAB-YUM POSITION

The Yab-Yum position is classic in tantra. Your partner sits cross-legged (or on a cushion), and you sit on their lap, facing them, wrapping your legs around their back. This position aligns the chakras and allows for deep, full-body contact. Once settled, place your hands on each other's hearts. Begin a conscious breathing pattern: imagine inhaling love and light into your heart, and exhaling it into your partner's heart. After several rounds, visualize breathing in from your genitals up to your heart, and exhaling from your heart down to your partner. This starts the circulation of sexual energy.

3. THE AWAKENING: SLOW, MINDFUL TOUCH

This is not about arousal in the conventional sense. It is about awakening every cell of the body. One partner takes the lead first. Using the fingertips, lightly trace the outline of your partner's body, starting at the crown of the head, moving down the sides of the face, the neck, shoulders, arms, hands, and fingers. Then move to the chest, stomach, sides, hips, legs, and feet. The touch should be feather-light, curious, and exploratory. The receiving partner simply focuses on the sensations. Switch roles. This practice builds immense sensitivity and trust.

4. THE ROCKING AND ENERGY BUILDING

While still in Yab-Yum or a similar position, begin a gentle, slow rocking motion together. This is not a frantic movement but a rhythmic, side-to-side or circular motion. As you rock, continue your synchronized breathing. Visualize a current of energy moving between you—up your partner's spine, through your connection, and down your spine, creating a loop. You may begin to feel warmth, tingling, or a sense of expansion. This is the energy building. Do not rush toward any goal. Stay with the sensation. Pleasure grows in the stillness between breaths and movements.

5. THE PROLONGED UNION AND GAZING

When you feel ready, transition into a position of union, such as the classic missionary or the partner on top (the Yab-Yum position can also allow for union). The key is to move extremely slowly. The goal is to maintain the deep connection, eye contact, and synchronized breath. Focus on the sensation of the union itself—the warmth, the fullness, the closeness. Move slowly, perhaps just a few undulations per minute. If you feel the urge to rush or grasp at climax, pause. Take a deep breath together and return to stillness. This practice of riding the edge between pleasure and release is where tantric bliss is found. You are learning how to tantric love making by unlearning the habit of chasing orgasm.

Deepening the Connection: Beyond the Physical

Tantric love making is as much an emotional and spiritual practice as it is a physical one. To truly master how to tantric love making, you must also explore the deeper layers of connection.

Vocal Toning and Sound: Sound is a powerful conductor of energy. Allowing yourself to make sounds—a soft moan, a hum, a sigh—can release trapped energy and deepen the experience. You can also sync your sounds with your breath, creating a harmonic resonance between you.

Sharing Feelings and Appreciations:

During your practice, take moments to whisper an appreciation to your partner. "I love the way you are breathing with me" or "I feel so safe in your presence." This verbal connection reinforces the emotional bond and keeps the heart open.

Common Challenges When Learning Tantric Love Making

It is common to encounter obstacles as you learn this new way of being intimate. Recognizing them is the first step to moving through them.

- Distraction and Wandering

Mind: This is natural. When you notice your mind drifting to a to-do list or a worry, gently bring your attention back to your breath or your partner's touch. Do not judge yourself.

- Performance

Anxiety: Let go of the need to "do it right."

Tantra is about authenticity, not perfection. The only goal is presence and connection.

- Difficulty

Slowing Down:

Our culture trains us to be fast. If you feel impatient, take a deep breath and verbally check in with your partner: "I am feeling a little rushed. Can we pause and just hold each other for a minute?"

- Physical

Discomfort:

Keep cushions and blankets nearby. Do not ignore physical pain. Adjust your position as needed. Comfort is essential for relaxation and energy flow.

Tips for Integrating Tantra into Your Daily Life

How to tantric love making is not just a bedroom practice. The principles can be woven into your everyday relationship.

1. Practice Conscious

Breathing

Together: Take one minute each day to sit and breathe together before you start your day or before sleep.

2. Use Mindful

Touch Often: A gentle hand on the small of the back, a slow caress of the arm when passing by—these small acts keep the energy alive.

3. Prioritize Eye

Contact: During a regular conversation, pause and look into each other's eyes for 30 seconds without speaking. This builds intimacy.

4. Express

Gratitude

Daily: Verbally acknowledge something you appreciate about your partner every day. This keeps the heart connection strong.

Conclusion

Learning how to tantric love making is an invitation to transform your intimate life from a routine act into a sacred ritual of connection. It asks you to slow down, breathe consciously, and meet your partner in a space of complete presence. The techniques are simple, but the practice is deep. By embracing the principles of mindfulness, energy circulation, and heart-centered connection, you can unlock levels of intimacy, pleasure, and spiritual unity that extend far beyond the physical. Begin with a single breath, a single touch, and a single moment of shared stillness. That is where the journey truly begins.